Library gala features renowned Curve Lake author

DREW HAYDEN Taylor will be the Friends of the Haliburton County Public Library's 14th guest for their annual gala. Other guests have included Giller winner Michael Redhill, CBC journalist Carol Off, as well as journalist turned novelist and also a Giller winner, Linden MacIntyre. The gala is the Friends' biggest fundraiser of the year and helps the library buy things like e-books, special print collections, and technology that are not currently in the library's budget. As our economic climate changes there will be more pressures on the library budget than ever before and fundraising like what the Friends do will become more and more important.

BESSIE SULLIVAN
BESSIE'S BOOKS

An Ojibway from the Curve Lake First Nation, Drew Hayden Taylor has worn many hats in his literary career, from performing stand-up comedy at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., to lecturing at the British Museum on the films of Sherman Alexie. Over the last two decades, he has been an award-winning playwright (with more than 70 productions of his work), a journalist/columnist (with a column in several newspapers across the country), short-story writer, novelist and scriptwriter (The Beachcombers, North of Sixty, etc.), and has worked on 17 documentaries exploring the Indigenous experience.

He also has several novels to his credit including Motorcycles and Sweetgrass which was published in 2010. Otter Lake is a sleepy Anishnawbe community where little happens. Until the day a handsome stranger pulls up astride a 1953 Indian Chief motorcycle – and turns Otter Lake completely upside down. Maggie, the reserve's chief, is swept off her feet, but Virgil, her teenage son, is less than enchanted.

This month another novel about Otter Lake comes out called Chasing Painted Horses, it is the story of four unlikely friends. On the cusp of becoming teenagers, Ralph, his sister Shelley, and their friend William befriend an odd little girl from a dysfunctional family. She draws an amazing image of a horse, a drawing no child or adult should be able to draw. The horse represents everything that's wrong in the girl's life, and the trio are left trying to figure out what the horse means to the girl, and later to them. The Haliburton County Public Library has several copies of both novels mentioned here.

The gala occurs on Oct. 27 at the Pinestone and begins at 1 p.m. where you can purchase the guest's books and get them signed, as well as bidding on silent auction items. There are some great items to be found at the auction including many donations from local artists. Some people start their holiday shopping at this annual event where the Friends of the Library also sell packaged gently used books. Drew Hayden Taylor will speak at 2 p.m. For the third year in a row, Pinestone is offering a $10 lunch special in Stone 21 for those who would like to arrive earlier than 1 p.m. You do have to reserve a spot for the lunch and show your ticket to get the special. Tickets can be purchased for $25 by calling Joan at 705-457-1789. There are also tickets available at Master's Book Store along with books by Drew Hayden Taylor. As always, there are a limited number of tickets for the event and it has sold out in the past.

"COMMITTED TO EXCELLENCE, COMMITTED TO YOU"

Gardening in the wild: Purple people eater

THE TOPIC is not actually purple people eater. Rather it's more like people eating purple, but that wouldn't be a very catchy title, would it? Besides, I rather like the song written by Sheb Wooley way back in 1958.

While harvesting the new-to-me purple broccoli "Santee F1 Organic," I reflected on the number of purple vegetables that I grew this year. Just what made those beets, peppers and potatoes purple? Why did the eggplant choose a purple cloak instead of orange or red?

BELINDA GALLAGHER
Garden Musings

Was it fashion or fad that encouraged breeders to develop "Purple Haze" carrots? They are a fun-coloured vegetable, purple with an orange core, but is the colour important? Does purple help the plant or benefit those who eat it?

After some research, it turns out that the role of purple may be all of the above and a bit more.

First, where does this purple come from? It turns out that the colour comes from naturally occurring chemicals. These water-soluble pigments (either anthocyanins or betalains) are biological antioxidants.

The superfood craze of the past few years introduced us to the importance of antioxidants – think blueberries, kale, sweet potato and a number of other plants. According to the Mayo Clinic site, "Antioxidants are substances that may protect your cells against the effects of free radicals — molecules produced when your body breaks down food or is exposed to tobacco smoke and radiation. Free radicals may play a role in heart disease, cancer and other diseases."

These beneficial purple-making plant pigments also have anti-inflammatory properties. So it seems purple is good for us.

As far as plant health goes, purple protects from strong sunshine and assists in drought and salt tolerance. There is also research indicating compounds that produce purple have fungicidal properties. Most importantly, purple can attract seed dispersers. Purple shows up well against a green background and can indicate to wildlife that a fruit or vegetable is ripe. Anyone who has grown grapes or cherries knows that a bird can spot a ripe purple cherry from miles away, long before the gardener gets out to pick the crop.

The birds or bears eat the fruit then "pass" the seed in a new location thus spreading the offspring.

Three unusual things turned up:

- purple-causing betalains have been found in fluorescent flowers
- natural betalains from beets are being tested in dye-sensitized solar cells for use in solar panels
- one of the betalains called Betanin is used as a natural food dye and can cause "beeturia" or red urine in some people. Yikes.

Back to those purple vegetables, here are some of the garden successes.

Beans

Purple bush beans have been around for years. An heirloom cultivar called "Royal Burgundy" was first bred at the University of New Hampshire around the time I was born in the mid-1950s. It is still the best purple bean, from my point of view, producing a reliable crop despite the weather of the summer. Moreover, it is a good keeper. I blanch and freeze several pounds and it provides servings through winter, spring and into the next harvest.

The mystery of why the beans turn to green when cooked goes back to those sneaky antioxidants. The anthocyanins in the bean's plant cells (that make them purple) react to acidity and when beans are cooked the heat breaks the cells and dilutes the chemical. The green that was

Every Thanksgiving turkey is different

JANET TRULL
Special to County Life

WHEN I WAS in Grade 1, we were asked to bring a potato to school the week before Thanksgiving. And as many feathers as we could find. Mrs. Brown gave us each a turkey head to colour, along with very specific directions on the correct colour for the wattle. Red. The beak was orange. The head was yellow. You would think that all 30 potato turkeys would look the same at the end of the day, but incredibly, no two were alike. I considered mine to be the best by far, with lovely authentic wild turkey feathers that my father collected on his rambles. Some turkeys had one or two scraggly seagull feathers. And the differences in colouring? Don't get me started on the amateur skills of my classmates.

Now, looking back over decades of Thanksgiving dinners, I realize that, indeed, no two turkeys have been the same. Some have been overcooked (for fear of salmonella poisoning). Some have been undercooked. Which is far worse. The mashed potatoes and candied yams are on the table. The gravy is bubbling hot, And the grandfather proudly carves into the breast, only to reveal pinkish meat and bloody drippings. This means dinner is either hours away, with everyone starving, or a quick visit to the kitchen where the bird is torn apart and microwaved into chewy chunks. Extra gravy and stuffing are required to save the day.

Then there have been years, more than I care to admit, when I was overwhelmed and bought the frozen, pre-stuffed bird. It gets more rave reviews than you might think. In fact I'm not sure anyone notices the difference.

One October, our youngest daughter was working on an organic farm. She offered to bring a grain-fed free range turkey. She would slaughter it herself. "You better enjoy this turkey!" she told us, after a gruelling, blood-splattering, feather-flying description of how difficult it really is to saw through a turkey's neck.

Most memorable, however, was the year when nobody was in the mood for the cooking marathon that is Thanksgiving. It was the last year in our original family cottage. The passing of the torch from one cottaging generation to the next had left us with the decision to sell and move to a cottage with a little more comfort and enough room for everyone. My mother-in-law, who had always done the lion's share of preparation, had passed. Joyce had made it look so effortless! Baking pies, making stuffing, organizing the potato-peeling brigade. And she still had enough time to wax leaves with the grandchildren.

The cottage kitchen seemed gloomy. We managed to get a turkey into the oven, congratulating ourselves with an early glass of wine. When that bottle was gone, we played horseshoes. Blue sky, falling leaves, warmer than usual temperature. It was thirsty work, and someone remarked at the irony of Grampa's well-stocked liquor cabinet. He'd never been a drinker, but he often received gifts that he was too polite to turn down. Crown Royal in a soft felt bag. Some nice single malt scotch. The sons-in-law supplemented the happy afternoon with a cooler of beer as we changed challenges to a washer toss competition.

We were all taken by surprise when someone thought to check the turkey and it was falling-off-the-bone perfect. But where were the potatoes? The turnip dish? The cranberry sauce? We stood around the kitchen counter and a ravenous hunger overcame us. Like cavemen, we pulled that sucker apart. Legs and thighs and breasts.

OH! It was the best thing I ever tasted. We picked the carcass clean, our hands and faces greasy with turkey drippings.

Upon hearing the story, my friend commented that we were like a ship that had lost its rudder. And that is true. We didn't appreciate that rudder. How it kept the family on course, even in stormy weather. How it made our journey easier. Happier.

As it turns out, we have been able to patch the holes in our ship and salvage the old rudder. It will never be quite the same, but it guides us from one Thanksgiving to the next. We try hard to be civilized, setting the table with Grandma's dishes and using forks and knives instead of fingers. And we celebrate the differences in turkeys.

Top 10 places to look for your reading glasses

IF YOU WEAR reading glasses, you spend a significant portion of your life looking for them or asking other people if they have seen them. That can be annoying for everyone.

STEVE GALEA
Humour Columnist

With that in mind here are the top 10 places to look for your reading glasses.

1. On your head.
2. In the mirror.
3. With all your other reading glasses.
4. The last place you left them.
5. With the fine print.
6. In every pocket you own.
7. Under the cushion you just sat on.
8. No point looking. There's plenty more at any lost and found.
9. You'd look, but what's the point without your glasses.
10. At the end of your new eyewear straps.

Purple kale stunning in the garden

always there is unmasked.

Broccoli

Broccoli "Santee Organic" that I mentioned earlier is what they call a mini-sprouting broccoli. It has lots of small florets that can be harvested over an extended period. A descendant of a broccoli called Bordeaux, this purple vegetable is pretty in a stir-fry or a salad. I found the stems a bit tough, but the florets were delicious. It matured pretty late so I will start the plants a couple weeks earlier next year.

Kale

Several varieties of kale are planted each year and I am slowly whittling down to a few favourites. "Black Magic" kale topped the list for years. Commonly called Tuscan, black or dinosaur kale, it has long, narrow leaves that look like the skin of a reptile. It is sweeter and a bit less chewy when raw so does well in a salad. Last year we grew "Redbor" kale and it took over first place in the category.

Curly kale has been around since the fourth century in Greece but Redbor was the first reddish-purple curly kale. It is stunning in both the vegetable garden and in a flower border or container planting. The colour intensifies as the weather gets colder and I find the flavour does, too. It can be harvested so late into the season that you have to rinse off the fallen needles of larch trees that drop in late November.

Kohlrabi

This peculiar vegetable is like a cross between turnip and a kale. A member of

Purple produce focus of recent food trends

the cabbage family, it forms a bulbous root above the ground and can be eaten raw or cooked. On a vegetable tray it adds a radish-like crunch and broiled, boiled or roasted it has a sweet, mild flavour. Kohlrabi is very popular in Europe and has been on dinner menus for about 500 years.

I didn't grow eggplant, sweet potatoes or purple tomatoes this year, so those stories will wait for another time, except to note that in 2017 the superfood craze was focused on the purple sweet potato.

Apparently there are a lot of people eating purple on the Japanese island of Okinawa. The purple sweet potato is a popular food there and is credited with the healthy population of elderly folks, many over 100. It is also credited with a reported lower rate of dementia.

Whether it's purple people eater or people eating purple, it's the colour for me.

Note: According to Wikipedia, "The song (Purple People Eater) establishes that the creature eats purple people, but not whether or not it is itself purple." The song spent six weeks at No. 1 on Billboard Pop Chart. Just so you know.

Kohlrabi, which is a bit like a turnip and kale, has been popular in Europe for 500 years. The purple variety is particularly stunning. You can eat kohlrabi raw or cooked and has a sweet, mild flavour.

Volunteers turn donations into apple sauce

Haliburton County agencies and non-profit organizations are celebrating the impactful contributions of community members in making this year's Apple Sauce Project a resounding success.

The Apple Sauce Project is a community initiative that turns unused apples from local trees into apple sauce, which is then frozen and distributed to seniors and families.

"The 2019 season of the Apple Sauce Project has been a fantastic success," said apple sauce project lead Kate Hall of HKPR District Health Unit. "Local residents donated apples from trees on their properties. Their contributions helped get this year's Apple Sauce Project off to a great start."

A team of volunteers visited local orchards and properties to pick apples. "Seven volunteers donated their time to harvest apples. We're really grateful for their hard work," stated Nancy Brownsberger of Haliburton Highlands Health Services. "In addition, we want to thank the local property owners that permitted us to pick apples from their properties and orchards. It was a bumper year for apples!"

Over two days, the donated and picked apples were then turned into apple sauce. "We had 16 volunteers spend time in the SIRCH Community Kitchen, washing, cutting, cooking, processing, packaging, and freezing apple sauce," explained Jay McIvor of SIRCH Community Services. "It's an amazing feeling knowing your efforts make a difference in our community. Thanks to all the volunteers for participating!"

The Minden Community Food Centre also participated in the Apple Sauce Project. "Our volunteers work very well together. Not only have they made containers of apple sauce, but they also made apple crisp, which is also really popular with our food bank's clients," said Marilynne Lesperance, Community Kitchen manager of the Minden Community Food Centre. "We have a really good system in place."

In total, 1,694 containers of apple sauce were made. Over the coming months the apple sauce will be distributed by Meals On Wheels, SIRCH Frozen Meals, and local food banks.

"The Apple Sauce project is a great example of community partners successfully working together to ensure everyone in our community has access to fresh, local and nutritious food," said Kate Hall.

The Apple Sauce Project is facilitated by community partnerships:

Imagine knowing you won't eat today

Imagine knowing you cannot feed your children more than two meals a day until your paycheque comes in at the end of the week. Imagine that you are isolated and alone during the long winter months. Or that you want to work but you are in need of job training.

For many people in Haliburton County, this doesn't have to be imagined – it's the reality of everyday life.

SIRCH Community Services cares!

For 30 years, SIRCH Community Services has existed to identify gaps in health and social services in Haliburton County, and then implement initiatives and programs that help to address those gaps.

SIRCH offers programs, training opportunities, and social enterprises to address issues of poverty, food insecurity, isolation, and training.

Last year, SIRCH:

- Gave 3,600 free nutritious frozen meals to those in need
- Provided 1,200 additional free sit-down lunches to provide connection during tough times
- Supported 40 moms and 80 children who faced difficult situations
- Helped 33 children succeed in kindergarten
- Provided concrete skills to 14 people who then joined the work force

School program benefits from paddle art contest

Almost $33,000 raised in second Algonquin Outfitters charity paddle art auction

Given a blank canvas, it's amazing what an artist can create. And given a good cause, what a community can do is no less impressive.

The second Algonquin Outfitters charity paddle art contest and auction not only featured amazing works of art, each created from a blank paddle, it raised $12,000 more than the inaugural 2017 auction.

The paddle art contest began early in 2018, when the paddle blanks could be picked up by artists with their $30 entry fee. Artists had 18 months until the contest deadline to carve, paint, or adorn their paddles however they wished. By the end of August this year, 182 paddles had been submitted. Some paid homage to the local landscape and wildlife. Others were more abstract. All were a unique representation of the artists' visions.

"It was really incredible to see all of the different paddles come in," said Randy Mitson, marketing director for Algonquin Outfitters, adding that there were several professional artists who entered, along with many very talented amateur artists.

The online auction began on Sept. 15 through auction site HiBid – a choice AO made to streamline the bidding process. Two events at the Algonquin Theatre – a sneak peek on Sept. 27 featuring live music by Sean Cotton who played the four-string Paddle Guitar and a six-hour live event on Sept. 28 featuring the short film Wild Temagami and music by Hack and Heron – gave bidders a chance to see the paddles in person.

By the time the first paddles started to close on Sept. 29, fundraising had already exceeded the amount raised in the inaugural auction. Paddles closed one at a time and, if a bid was placed within the last minute, an additional 60 seconds was added to the clock to allow other bidders to counter. When the last paddle closed, an incredible $32,875 had been raised for five arts organizations.

A Touch of Fall, created by local wood carver Don McKenzie, received the top bid of $1,675. Followed closely by Feather Your Paddle created by Susan Dell that received a bid of $1,450. See all of the paddles, and their bid totals, at https://algonquinoutfitters.hibid.com/catalog/183382/2019-algonquin-outfitters-paddle-art-auction/.

"We had hoped to surpass the last total," said Mitson. "We're thrilled that it raised so much more, funds that will support the arts."

There were more than 400 registered bidders who made 4,331 bids during the auction. They came from across Canada, including the Yukon and Baffin Island, the northeastern U.S., Texas, and the U.K. Paddles will be ready for pick up soon, or can be shipped to bidders if requested.

Proceeds from the auction will support the Algonquin Art Centre, the Artists in Schools program in Haliburton, Oxtongue Lake for Arts and Culture (OLAC), the Tom Thomson Gallery in Owen Sound, and the Town of Huntsville's reserve fund for future acquisition of public art.

Prizes in the contest, which go to the eight artists whose paddles received the top bids, included Algonquin Outfitters gift cards worth $500 each, a prize bundle from The Tom Thomson Art Gallery, a $250 gift certificate from the Oxtongue Craft Cabin, dinner for two at Bartlett Lodge, a White Birches Resort getaway for two, and four months of unlimited yoga from Veda Yoga.

Will they do it again? Yes! says Mitson. Watch the Algonquin Outfitters website for contest details in early 2020. The third Algonquin Outfitters Charity Paddle Art Auction will be held in the fall of 2021.

Art and dementia

A SAD OBSERVATION for any of us dealing with a relative or friend with dementia is that person's loss of joy.

Someone you've known as alert, active and happy can become quiet and withdrawn, and missing the joy they once found in so many things.

Dementia treatment usually involves medicines, but there is a trend toward non-pharmaceutical treatment with group activities that bring back some joy to the participant.

JIM POLING SR.

One non-pharmaceutical treatment, popular in Australia, involves visits to art galleries. It is called the Art and Dementia program and Haliburton Country residents will have opportunities to learn about it next week from Adriane Boag, learning and access co-ordinator with the National Gallery of Australia.

Boag will give four days of talks and workshops on the program. The events will take place in Haliburton village, West Guilford and Minden. Information on the events is available from Fay Wilkinson – fay@thecreativecocoon.com.

Wilkinson, who lives in Eagle Lake, is a registered expressive arts practitioner whose practice takes her across the country and around the world. She met Boag during a trip to Australia and the idea for bringing Art and Dementia program information to Haliburton was born.

The program was started in 2007 as Art and Alzheimer's at the National Gallery of Australia in Canberra. It was renamed Art and Dementia later to reflect the many types of dementia.

The program's aim is to promote well-being and quality of life for dementia patients by engaging them in the visual arts.

For example, a dementia patient is taken to an art gallery and sees The Water Lily Pond, a famous painting by Claude Monet. The painting and discussion about it reminds the patient of growing up in the country and draws that person out of their isolation.

"People living with dementia need help to live well," Boag says during a TED talk explaining the program. "And one of the best non-pharmaceutical treatments they receive could be a visit to a gallery."

Advocates of the Art and Dementia program, and others similar to it, say that new approaches to dementia are needed as the rate of illness increases with an aging population.

The World Health Organization says that every three seconds someone in the world develops dementia. It says the number of people living with dementia worldwide is estimated at 50 million, a figure expected to triple by 2050.

Canadian government statistics show that 419,000 Canadians age 65 or older have been diagnosed with dementia. Close to two-thirds of them are women.

The actual number of Canadians suffering dementia is believed to be significantly higher because the statistics do not include cases of people with younger dementia onset or people who are experiencing the symptoms but have not been officially diagnosed.

The Art and Dementia program aims to provide intellectual stimulation to patients and to reconnect them with their sense of identity. It also hopes to raise awareness that will help to reduce the social stigma associated with the condition.

"For somebody who has been active and in control of their life, the change in circumstances that dementia presents can be embarrassing, distressing and ultimately terrifying," Boag has said.

Boag is a trained artist with a major in painting and sculpture from the Sydney, Australia College of the Arts. She has worked in the visual arts field for more than 20 years.

Her four days of presentations begin Tuesday, Oct. 15 with a Lunch and Learn event scheduled for 11:30 a.m. at the Haliburton School of Art + Design.

THE BEST AND THE BRIGHTEST: Haliburton Highlands Secondary School paid tribute to its outstanding students Saturday afternoon during the annual Honours and Awards ceremony. Included among the recipients was this group of Ontario Scholars who achieved an 80% average in their OAC year. For a complete list of award recipients, see page 18.

Head for the Hills

How does Minden Hills sound?

Residents of Snowdon, Lutterworth, Anson, Hindon and Minden townships have a new name to get used to. The Transition Board approved the Name Selection Committee's recommendation at last Thursday's meeting.

The amalgamated townships will be known as the Corporation of the Township of Minden Hills, or Minden Hills, for short.

Name Selection Committee Chair Wendy Ladurantaye stressed the need for a name with which area residents and visitors could easily identify.

"The community should understand that their addresses will remain the same," she added.

Ladurantaye explained that the selection process was a difficult one. Many of the submitted names included Minden as one of the words. That was taken into account when the final decision was made. It was a close competition between Minden Hills and Five Rivers.

"I think it's an excellent choice,"

Dianne Graham named Citizen of the Year

by Matthew Sitler

Honoured for her many talents, community spirit and shrewd marketing capabilities, Dianne Graham has been named the Minden Rotary Club's Citizen of the Year.

Presented during last Monday's Rotary Club meeting, held at the Wagon Wheel Restaurant, the surprised Graham accepted the award gratefully. Rotary Past-President Bill Roszell presented a plaque to Graham after citing her past accomplishments and outstanding personal qualities.

"After moving to Minden, Dianne didn't take very long before getting very deeply involved," noted Roszell. "As a member of the County Town Museum Committee, she researched Minden's history well-enough that she was able to develop and present historical walking tours of Minden for several years."

Dianne Graham moved to Minden in 1991. No stranger to the area - she had vacationed with her family at Miner's Bay Lodge in the past. It was at this time that she fell in love with the Haliburton Highlands.

Arriving with husband Gord, Dianne initially continued her work with Via Rail where she was in charge of public relations for eastern Ontario. The job allowed Dianne to work from her riverside home in Minden, but on a regular basis the position required she commute to Toronto and other places before retiring. Graham worked closely with the Travel and Tourism industry, designing brochures, writing press releases, speeches for executives and organizing special events.

After retiring to Minden, Dianne immersed herself in the community. "She was one of the original organizers of the highly successful Home and Garden Tour," said Roszell. "This year, as the Chair of the Home and Garden Committee, Dianne guided the organization through its sixth successful tour, bringing the total contributions to the local health services capital campaign to over $25,000."

Dianne has served on the Board of Directors of the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce, this past year as Director, Secretary and Marketing Representative. "It is not unusual to see Dianne in an unofficial capacity, cleaning up flower boxes, picking up trash and generally showing pride in the appearance of the community," said Roszell.

"She applied for the position of Administrator at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery and, in September 1998, gladly accepted it." Since then, Dianne has taken on the responsibility of the Minden County Town Museum Complex as well.

Roszell quoted Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Jeanne Anthon as saying "The visibility of the gallery can now be enhanced and increased through a strong marketing campaign."

Presenting the plaque to Graham, Roszell concluded his remarks with a heartfelt congratulation. "It is with great pleasure Dianne, that I present you with this award."

"I am totally flabergasted," said the graceful winner. "I am just stunned, thrilled and honored - of course I accept this also on behalf of my husband. He's my right hand, my left hand - my everything."

In closing, Dianne said she would hang her plaque at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery so that the public could see and learn about Rotary. As part of the Citizen of the Year Award, the Rotary Club will make a $200 donation to a charity of her choice. Dianne's donation will go to the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation.

Minden's Citizen of the Year, Dianne Graham, is seen here with Rotary Club President John Kerr and the plaque she received.
